

Contributing to the Ministry of Environment and Urbanization's Greenhouse Gas Emissions Monitoring Project RWE & Turcas Denizli Plant Becomes Pilot Test Facility

The Denizli power plant of RWE & Turcas Güney Elektrik Üretim A.Ş. became one of the pilot study facilities for the Greenhouse Gas Emissions Monitoring Project implemented by the Ministry of Environment and Urbanization in association with the World Bank. The project will take place between January and July 2015.

The purpose of the project is to build a system for monitoring, reporting and verifying emissions by the Ministry of Environment and Urbanization. Pilot studies aim to improve the implementation capabilities of the system as well as those stakeholders with emission reporting requirements. By volunteering the Denizli plant as a test facility, RWE & Turcas intend to provide technical support to preparing greenhouse gas monitoring plans, greenhouse gas emission reports and verification reports, contributing to reporting accuracy and capacity improvement in the industry with the help of expert advice.

Preparations for the project have been underway since 2012 with stakeholder meetings and industry trainings involving the Ministry of Environment and Urbanization, the Association of Electricity Producers, EÜAŞ, and representatives of the industry.

"We are proud to be a volunteer pilot facility"

Hans-Jürgen Petschke, CTO of RWE & Turcas, said "As RWE & Turcas, we are proud to be a part of pilot studies for preparing a Monitoring Plan and Emissions Report in the electricity sector." Petschke continued that our objective was to support security of energy supply and production of environmentally friendly energy in Turkey, offering innovative solutions to their customers while contributing to the sector.

RWE is one of the five leading electricity and gas companies in Europe with a turnover of 48 billion Euros and 60,000 employees. RWE's Denizli plant is able to provide electricity to 3.5 million residential customers in Turkey.
